—The democrats are preparing for a general demonstration this evening—All right—they are feeling good and why not let them have a good time. Stalwart republicans are as sure of Blaine's election at this time as the most sanguine democrat is of his defeat. Yet something must be done to ally the political excitement.

—The past week has been one of unprecedented political excitement, all business having been generally abandoned. It is to be hoped that to-morrow the political disputes should be allowed to rest, and that they seek the holy precincts of the churches instead of the worldly precincts of the bulletin boards.

THE DEMOCRACY.

Their Impromptu Justification Last Evening.

The news from New York, received in this city last evening, was so favorable to the democrats that they could not be held in check, and the younger members of the party, including C. L. Clark, E. M. Hyzer, Wm. Smith and J. M. Burgess, and one or two others, with the Catholic cornet band, formed a procession on North Main street, determined to make the most of their good news. This procession started directly for the west side, and upon crossing the bridge, they were joined by a large number of boys, and about two hundred men, and the democratic banner was set on foot.

Up and down the streets they marched, the band playing "Marching through Georgia," and the crowd crying themselves hoarse with yells for their candidates. Many of the older heads of the party disapproved any demonstration at this time, as a little premature, but this council was unheeded.

The unorganized crowd halted in front of the postoffice, and the Cleveland and Blaine adherents here vied with one another in cheering their respective leaders. There was an immense and excited crowd of people on the streets, the democrats had several bonfires in different parts of the city which were kept burning until a late hour. The demonstration was a very orderly one considering the great excitement.

Many of the republican leaders were favored with a serenade by their democratic friends. They also serenaded Hon. John Winans and Mayor Richardson, where short speeches were made, and all this demonstration was the result of a bogus dispatch, which was taken by weak republicans as coming from the republican national committee. The dispatch read as follows:

"New York.—Estimated by the Central republican committee that Cleveland will carry New York by about 1,500 majority, and will be elected president."

This dispatch, unveiled and published in the Madison Democrat of this morning read as follows:

"Special to the Democrat.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Colonel Daniel S. Lamont, private secretary to Gov. Cleveland, telegraphs to the Democrat: "It is now conceded, that the official returns from all the counties of the state, give Cleveland about 1,500 plurality."

Margaret Mather as Julia, in "The Hunchback."

Margaret Mather, the talented young American actress, will occupy the Myer opera house on Tuesday, evening of next week, presenting "The Hunchback." Miss Mather appearing as "Julia."

The Boston Globe of Feb. 2d, says: "Margaret Mather's first appearance in Boston will readily be brought to memory by all who attended the drama of 'The Hunchback.' It was a great triumph for the young artist—such a triumph as our public seldom records, even to those long established in favor, and a success, therefore, that carried with it the highest compliment to the actress. Her first engagement began so auspiciously with a memorable fine impersonation of Juliet, continued to be attended by all the marks of prosperity. Though suffering from serious disease, Miss Mather battled bravely with adversity. It was a terrible contest, and these who accorded their plaudits so generously to her Juliet and her Leah little imagined at what a formidable effort success was gained."

So recently, it is hardly to be believed, that for days her life was despaired of. But for the constant care of her manager and her friends, it would in truth have been impossible for her to have lived, and she would have been a corpse, and a word period of rest, entered again on her career. Her return in Boston was the signal for a great demonstration of regard; and the brief return engagement proved to be very brilliant and successful.

The actress returned to the stage of this city last night with the prestige of a most prosperous season everywhere. She was seen for the first time at the Boston theatre, where so many celebrated players have labored with success. The audience, the grand old crowd from a large and appreciative assemblage. It has been said by critics elsewhere that Miss Mather's improvement since her earlier appearances as the heroine of "The Hunchback" is certainly true. There is added finish in the earlier scenes of the tragedy; the interview with the nurse, after her return from the first act, is more exquisitely managed than ever. So, too, the scenes in which she is seen, which is still somewhat suggestive at times of elocutionary method, but on the whole is most apt and expressive. In the grand tragic scenes she has a height of power that seemed greater even than that which she has attained at the height of her art. So, too, the scenes in which she is seen, which is still somewhat suggestive at times of elocutionary method, but on the whole is most apt and expressive. In the grand tragic scenes she has a height of power that seemed greater even than that which she has attained at the height of her art. The actress returned to the stage of this city last night with the prestige of a most prosperous season everywhere. She was seen for the first time at the Boston theatre, where so many celebrated players have labored with success. The audience, the grand old crowd from a large and appreciative assemblage. It has been said by critics elsewhere that Miss Mather's improvement since her earlier appearances as the heroine of "The Hunchback" is certainly true. There is added finish in the earlier scenes of the tragedy; the interview with the nurse, after her return from the first act, is more exquisitely managed than ever.
